336 LIVES LOST ON THE ANCONA

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Rome, Nov. 11.—The horror of the Ancona tragedy was increased today when officials of the line announced that the steamer carried 496 passengers It was sunk by an Austrian submarine. The crew numbered 160 men, making a total of 656 on board.

As only 320 have been reported saved, the passengers and sailors now practically given up as lost number 336

Malta, Nov 10, via London, Nov. 11 —Blind panic reigned on the Ancona during her final hours. Most of the steerage passengers were women and children who became insane with terror when the Austrian submarine began shelling the ship.

The Ancona was sunk on Monday afternoon. The submarine was sighted at 1 o'clock racing toward the Ancona at top speed. When the vessel was overhauled only a few minutes were given by the Austrian commander for the passengers to disembark.

This is the story told by one of the survivors who was landed here today:

'Practically all of the third class passengers on the Ancna were Greeks and Italian emigrants, bound for the land of promise—the United States. A majority of them were women and children .

'About 1 o'clock on Monday morning while we were steaming through the Mediterranean, a submarine was sighted in the distance. Through the glasses it could be seen that she was traveling at top speed toward us.

"So swift was the pace of the submarine that she was soon plainly visible on the surface, her prow throwing up sheets of spume as she sped in our direction.

'While still considerable distance away the submarine fired a few shots across our bows as a signal to heave to Immediatly most of the passengers came to the conclusion that we were being bombarded and the wildest panic ensued.

"Women ran screaming about the decks with wild eyed children clinging to their skirts. Others sought safety in their cabins. While some prayed for deliverance from death others hastily buckled on life preservers and prepared to clamber into the life boats.

"As we did not slow quick enough the submarine renewed her bombardment , and this time the shells were directed at the ship. Every time a projectile struck and the shattering of the wood and glass told when each shell struck its mark, pandemonium reigned.

"The excitable Italian and Greek women, believing that they were doomed, lost their heads completely. The men behaved not much better.

"Within a short time the submarine had drawn up alongside and and we could see that she was flying the Austrian flag. The commander shouted from the bridge that he would give us a few moments to get away.

"Make haste, he shouted I am going to sink your ship.'

"The submarine commander, smeared with the oil of the vessel's engines then gave an order and the underwater boat veered off. As he did so the gun on the big craft was again unlimbered and the shells began dropping around us, throwing up columns of spray high into the air

Working in a frenzy of haste the seamen on the Ancona began filling and lowering the lifeboats There was no time to think of anything but human safety and even in that fateful hour some of the emigrants sought to save their bundles of baggage and wept bitterly when they had to leave their effects behind. The life-savings of those poor people were swept away within a few minutes

"In their haste to lower the boats the seamen overturned some of them as the shrieking victims in the water climbed into already over-crowded lifeboats and these were soon swamped. Sailors who were manning the boats filled with women and children stood up and beat with their oars struggling victims in the water Many who were thus knocked unconscious sank to their death.

It was a terrible scene but some had to be sacrificed to prevent a disaster of even greater magnitude. If the men in the water had been allowed to climb into the overcrowded boats filled with women and children they too would have sunk

"Some clung to bits of wreckage. but the submarine made no effort to rescue them.

"Even as the lifeboats were being lowered and even as men, women and children helpless in the water, struggled to save themselves, the submarine opened up with her gun again Although she fired at the sinking Ancona, many of the shots fell into the water amidst the drowning victims.

"The terror on board the ship was nothing compared with the frightfulness of the scene afterwards Many went insane from sheer fright.

"I do not know how many were killed but I believe that at least fifty per cent of the passengers and crew lost their lives. The saddest part of the affair was that so many of the victims were women and little children."

TWELVE KILLED BY KANSAS CYCLONE

By Telegraph to The Freeman.

Hutchinson, Kansas, Nov. 11.—At least 12 persons were killed and 100 injured in the cyclone that swept an area sixteen miles wide in the neighborhood of Great Bend, Kansas, last night. It is feared that when communication is restored with the towns of Derby, Pratt and Larned a greater loss of life may be reported.

One report reaching here from Great Bend stated that fifty-seven persons were killed. Telephone and telegraph wires were down early today and a report of greater loss of life could not be confirmed.

The property damage so far is estimated at $500,000.

In Great Bend, which is forty miles from here, the Santa Fe railroad station was demolished. Three flour mills were twisted from their foundations and wrecked A large grain elevator was damaged A score of houses in a path three-fourths of a mile long were wrecked and many persons were caught in the debris.

Fires started in several parts of the city and burned to the ground The water plant of the city was out of commission and the fire department was helpless to combat the flames.

Telephone communication between Hutchinson and Great Bend was restored for a brief time at midnight, but no reliable estimates of the number of dead and injured had been obtained. The long distance telephone operator in Great Bend said that she had been told that 55 persons were dead and that most of the town was demolished.

Following the storm, rescue crews, working with the aid of kerosene lamps and lanterns, searched the ruins of the houses in the residence section of Great Bend for dead and injured. Volunteer workers were organized to finish tearing down partially destroyed houses, where it was believed dead or injured persons might be imprisoned

The town of Great Bend was saved from entire destruction by fire by the heavy downpour of rain that followed in the wake of the cyclone.

Apprehension was entertained today for the safety of a Santa Fe train that was due in Great Bend shortly after the storm struck here.

Reports reaching here from the storm swept district said that heavy damage had been inflicted in sections of Nebraska, South Dakota and Iowa. No deaths were reported from these districts, but several persons were said to have been injured in Hartford, S. D.

INDIRECT DAMAGE AWARD SET ASIDE

The appellate division of the supreme court at Albany on Wednesday handed down a unanimous decision in the matter of the claim of Benjamin O. Davis, which was the first of the indirect damages cases arising in the Ashokan region under the Water Supply Act to be carried to an appellate court.

The appeal to the appellate division was taken by the city of New York from the order of Judge Hasbrouck confirming the report of Ashokan Damage Commission No. 3, in which the commissioners made an award to Mr. Davis of $2,000 for damages claimed to have been sustained by him in the decrease of the value of his farm near Krumville.

Mr. Davis is the owner of a farm containing 199 acres situated near Krumville, about four miles south of the Ashokan reservoir On the farm were situated houses, barns and other farm buildings. There is also a large quantity of timber on the land; a quantity of wood suitable for manufacture into wood pulp, and several stone quarries Before the completion of the Ashokan dam and the filling of the basin, Mr. Davis's nearest railroad station was West Shokan which was 8 miles distant. The testimony showed that his farmis 8.2 miles from the new Ashokan station and 8 5 miles from the new Ashokan station and 8 5 miles from the High Falls station of the Ontario & Western railroad.

Much of the produce raised on the farm was sold in the neighborhood of Krumville and some of the produce was sold to a miller at Kerhonkson. Bluestone quarried on the farm the year preceding the trial of the claim was hauled to High Falls or Accord on the Ontario & Western railroad. For several years prior to that no bluestone had been sold from the quarries situated on the farm. Pine, hemlock, poplar and bass wood from the farm had been sold to the pulp mill on the Esopus creek which shut down the summer previous to the trial of the claim. Mr. Davis had not sold any pulp wood to the mill for four or five years as he thought he would wait a few years to sell it. Several years ago Mr. Davis's father had started a saw mill about a quarter of a mile away for the manufacture of lumber and headings. The claimant did not supply his father with lumber from the farm except as he had it cut to repair the buildings. John L McGrath and John D. Van Kleeck, who were called as expert witnesses on the part of the claimant, testified that on account of the changed conditions the standing timber was less valuable than it had been when the trees were younger. In Mr McGrath's opinion, the 800 cords of wood on the property in 1906 were worth $2 a cord, and in his opinion they were worth nothing at the time of the trial of the claim in 1913.

The commission found that the value of Mr. Davis's farm had been decreased by the acts of the city of New York and made an award of $2,000 to him. Confirmation of the award was opposed at special term, and the city appealed from Judge Hasbrouck's order confirming the award. The appeal was argued before the appellate division some time ago by Harrison T Slosson on behalf of Mr Davis and by William McM. Speer on behalf of the city of New York

Judge Kellogg of the appellate division has written the opinion in the case, in which all the other judges of the court concur. The court directs that the order of confirmation be reversed upon the law and the facts, the award to be set aside, and the matter remitted to another commission; the present commission being discharged from further consideration of the claim. If the parties cannot agree upon the commission to hear the claim application may be made to the court. Costs of the appeal to abide the event. The court disapproves of the finding of fact that the claimant's property has been indirectly decreased in value by reason of the acquiring of lands by the city of New York and that the amount of damages of said claimant for said decrease in value is the sum of $2,000.

FIRST DEBATE OF NEW HIGH SCHOOL

The Webster-Hayne Debating Club of the Kingston high school will hold its first debate of the season in the high school auditorium on Friday evening, November 12, at 8 o'clock.

The question to be discussed is: "Resolved, that immigration to the U S should be restricted by a literacy test." The affirmative is upheld by Stelle (leader), Deyo and Van Winkle, while the negative is to be defended by Greene (leader), Church and Winston. The debate will be of interest to many not only because the question is one of vital interest, but also because the leader of the negative, Mr. Greene, is well known as a debater, not only in Kingston but in debating circles up and down the river as well, since it was principally due to his efforts that the Kingston team beat Poughkeepsie in a debate last season.

As there will be no admission charged to hear the debate the club expects a large audience and gives assurance (based on the opinion of a teacher, Miss Noone, who is kindly coaching the teams) that it will be the best preliminary debate ever given by Kingston students.

On the results of this debate rests to a large extent the decision as to who will make the varsity team, that will debate against Albany, Newburgh and Poughkeepsie this winter.

The time for the direct argument will be eight minutes for each speech and the leaders, Greene and Stelle, will each have 12 minutes for refutation.

The high school orchestra has offered its services for the evening and the audience will be given an opportunity to see for itself that these young musicians deserve the praise they have received. Moreover a group of girls will give a little comedy while the judges are making their decision.

The executive committee has been fortunate in obtaining for the three judges, two teachers, Mrs. Witter and Miss Hull, and Prof. Michael

The friends of the opposing teams are earnestly invited and requested to come and give their support to their friends, as these students have spent considerable time in preparation for this debate and a contest of no little interest or strife is expected.

Delay at Broadway Crossing.

A young man with a suitcase, in boarding a trolley car at Fair and John streets at 6 o'clock last evening asked the conductor: "Governor, can you make the 6.20 ferry?" "We can if we are not held up at the West Shore crossing," replied the conductor. Always the time required to make any kind of a trip—afoot, by trolley, by wagon or by automobile—between the main bnsiness sections uptown and downtown depends on whether or not there will be a holdup at the crossing. Many a person has missed trains and boats, been late at meetings or belated in keeping engagements by reason of having to wait at the crossing.

Says Suffrage Will Win.

John Burroughs, noted naturalist, of West Park, is quoted: "Suffrage is bound to win in the end. In going around the country I find, especially among farmers, a very strong sentiment for it."

INCENDIARY FIRE IN MUNITION PLANT

By Telegraph to The Freeman

Trenton, N. J., Nov. 11.—Fire believed to have been of incendiary origin early this morning destroyed one of the buildings of the John A. Roebling Construction Company in which war munitions for the allies were being manufactured and spread to twenty surrounding houses. Calls for assistance were sent to Princeton and other surrounding towns, and by 5 30 a m. the blaze was under control

However it continued to burn fiercely and the firemen kept on pouring streams of water from half a dozen hoses upon the flames and upon nearby buildings. Fed by oils and other inflammable substances, the flames radiated a terrific heat and for a time the firemen could not get within two blocks of the burning building.

The destroyed building was a new one, 900 feet long and 700 feet wide which the plant had had under a strong guard ever since the pro-German agitation against the shipment of war supplies to the allies became intense. Following a fire in the plant last January the guards were doubled and other precautions were taken.

The fire was the second within less than twenty-four hours in plants manufacturing munitions for the allies, machine shop No. 1 of the Bethlehem Steel Company having been likewise destroyed yesterday.

Despite the elaborate police system and the alarms to catch intruders, the detectives who were investigating the conflagration believe that there is ground for the supposition that the fire was of incendiary origin. However, the guards declare that they saw no one lurking in the vicinity, nor did they see anything to arouse their suspicion.

It was suggested that an incendiary bomb might have been placed in the building, but no one could be found who heard an explosion

One of the most significant features of the fire was the rapidity which it ate its way through the four stories. The flames threw off myriads of live sparks and some of these fell upon the roof of a five story wire rope mill, some distance away, setting it on fire

Men were at work in the building when the fire broke out but all escaped. Workmen on the fourth floor smelled smoke and almost before the alarm could be sounded flames were shooting upward from the ground floor of the building. The fire gong was sounded and the workmen, dropping their tools, fled for their lives The building was equipped with fire escapes which undoubtedly prevented loss of life.

Awakened by the glare, scores of families in the vicinity hastened into the street So intense was the heat and so high were the flames against the sky that it looked as though a whole quarter of the city was burning. Persons living in the immediate vicinity began carrying their furniture and effects from their homes for it looked as though the firemen would be unable to check the fire's spread

The Roebling plant has been working night and day turning out barbed wire and chains for the allies.

One of the mills at the plant was destroyed last January with $1,500,000 loss. At that time Charles G. Roebling, head of the company, charged that agents of a foreign government were undoubtedly responsible.

GIRLS CALL UPON TWO PRISONERS

The two attractive young women who were present at the arraignment of Frederick W. Wilson, wanted on a charge of forging a check for $200 in Jacksonville, Fla., and Clarence A. Meigs, his companion, arrested for being a suspicious character, before Recorder Andrew Lang in police court on Wednesday afternoon, appeared at the court house during the afternon and asked to see the prisoners. They were conducted to the cells by Seth Jocelyn, the jailor, who remained near during the conference, which was comparatively brief. The girls said they are from Syracuse, from whence the prisoners came, and they are stopping at the Mott rooming house, 177 Wall street, where the men were arrested on Tuesday afternoon by Sergeant Murray, Deputy Sheriff William Cohen and A. W. Lynch, of the Burns detective agency The young women have given no information about themselves Wilson denied to Chief of Police Wood on Wednesday that either of them is his wife. Wilson has been held in $5,000 bail to await extradition papers and Meigs has been sentenced to pay a fine of $20 or spend 20 days in jail. The young man for a week has been soliciting orders for enlarging photographs.

VERDICT OF $3,500 FOR WM. TRAINOR

On the convening of supreme court at 10 o'clock this morning a jury which heard the suit of William Trainor of Eddyville vs. the Nitro Powder Co. of Mingo Hollow for $15,000 damages for the loss of a thumb and two fingers of the left hand and his right eye in an explosion of nitro-glycerine in August, 1911, reported to Justice G. D. B. Hasbrouck that it had found for the plaintiff in the sum of $3,500. The jury retired late Wednesday afternoon and reached a verdict about 10 o'clock, having been out over five hours, including the time spent at dinner in the Hotel Stuyvesant at the expense of the county of Ulster.

Amos Van Etten, attorney for the defendant company, moved that the verdict be set aside as contrary to law.

The Court—"This is a case I have given a great deal of consideration to. I think the questions involved were for the jury to decide, and I will sustain its verdict."

A stay of 30 days was granted, and 60 days were given for the preparation of a case on appeal, which it is understood the Nitro Powder Company will prosecute.

DISCUSS DANGERS OF POWDER MILLS

Able Summing Up In Case of Trainor Against Nitro Co. by Attorneys Van Etten and Cunningham, Who Incidentally Exchange Compliments—Jury Retires Late Wednesday Afternoon.

With a large box, marked "Nitro," "Dangerous Explosive" and "The Nitro Powder Co. of Kingston, N. Y."—a receptacle similar to those in which dynamite is packed for shipment at the Mingo Hollow plant in the mountains on the other side of Rondout creek—reposing on a table in view of the jury, Amos Van Etten, attorney for the corporation, associated with Joseph M Fowler and Emanuel Metzger, began summing up at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the action for $15,000 damages for personal injuries brought by William Trainor of Eddyville, an old canal boatman, who out of a job the middle of 1911, applied for and secured employment at the dynamite works in July, continuing until he was injured on August 21. The plaintiff lost two fingers and a thumb of his left hand and his right eye in an explosion, which resulted when he attempted to cut with a stone a corner off his apron on which had been spilled a small quantity of nitro-glycerine, known among powder mill employes as "oil" and believed by Trainor, as his testimony showed, to be some kind of oil, comparatively harmless though inflammable and not a highly dangerous explosive.

Mr Van Etten spoke for [illegible] minutes, ably and persuasively. "Do not get mixed up by the ingenuity of my friend Cunningham," said Mr. Van Etten to the jury. "He is a 'slick' lawyer. He tries many cases in this court and tries them well. I dare say there is no other lawyer who tries a case so earnestly."

The attorney spoke his sympathy for the plaintiff, but said it was the duty of the jury to take the evidence, and applying common sense to it, render a verdict without regard to sympathy prejudice or anything else except the facts as it believed them.

He declared every one in the vicinity of Mingo Hollow knows there is a dangerous plant there. He said he had visited it and proceeded to serve notice on his associate, Mr Metzger, president of the company, that he intended to charge extra in his fee for the risk he had run. 'Everyone in the plant who used the slightest degree of care knew that oil' was nitro-glycerine," said Mr. Van Etten. Trainor says he did not know what it was—that he thought it was oil." The speaker said the fact regarding the accident in which Trainor figured was that he had spilled nitro-glycerine before, and when he discovered a spot on his apron he wanted to get it off before the foreman saw it, as he had been "called down" for such mishaps.

The attorney argued that the plaintiff had been given full warning of the dangerous nature of the substance called "oil" and his injuries were due to his own negligence. "In the early days our forefathers kindled fire by friction of stones," said Mr Van Etten, 'but who ever heard of a man trying to cut off a piece of cloth with stones?"

I don't believe there is a county in the [illegible] where more blasting is done or more dynamite used than in Ulster,' said the speaker. 'Trainor once was employed in a quarry near the Eddyville end of the West Shore bridge and right over the hill is the plant where the stuff is made that is used in blasting operations. Is it reasonable to assume he was not familiar with the dangerous character of explosives?" He said a servant owes a duty as well as a master; he must inquire regarding dangerous work.

Mr. Cunningham for Plaintiff.

District Attorney William D Cunningham, with whom was associated in presenting the plaintiff's case Frederick G. Traver, spoke for a little less than an hour. In beginning he referred to an alleged practice of corporation attorneys in defending negligence actions of saving "the plaintiff has sought in to insert his hands into the pockets" of the companies, even to return the compliment a opponent had paid him, the speaker said the summing up just concluded was the smoothest and [illegible] argument and assertion of facts I ever have heard in my [illegible] career.' The legal profession, particularly among [illegible] members 'abounds a grain [illegible] be inserted' Mr Cunningham then delivered an eloquent talk on the protection and care the law throws around workmen. He said the laws are aimed not by high-browed specifics instructing them how to fix up their back lots, but by law requiring employers to provide a high standard of care.

"The defense contends that Trainor knew all about 'oil' and then went out and cut through a spot of the substance on his apron," observed the speaker "There is something wrong here in logic."

"It was negligence on the part of the Nitro Powder Co. to permit nitroglycerine to be known as 'oil' The company saw to it that the men were not instructed regarding the materials which they handled Foremen were ordered in writing to give no information beyond that directly concerning the work to be done Trainor was given no instructions."

Mr. Cunningham attacked the testimony of Superintendent Ballan and read and ridiculed the rules of the company. The latter were referred to as a "wonderful piece of literature" Incidentally Mr Cunningham said nitro-glycerine is composed of nitric acid and sweet glycerine, each harmless by itself. Mixed together they become a most deadly explosive so that a very small quantity would be sufficient to blow up this building (the court house) Trainor was only told, said his attorney, that the "oil" would burn, nothing was said to him about the danger of striking it.

Justice Hasbrouck's Charge.

The charge to the jury by Justice Hasbrouck included a clear, simple statement of the duties and rights respectively of employers and employes. An employe under the law, said the court, assumes only such risks as are open, obvious and apparent, not risks of which he could not have knowledge. It was for the jury to decide whether Trainor could or should have had knowledge of the nature of "oil."

"Before a party to a lawsuit can be subjected to damages in cases of negligence like this," said Justice Hasbrouck, 'it is incumbent on the plaintiff to prove the defendant was guilty of the negligence which caused the accident Frequently it is the case that accidents happen which could not have been foreseen and for which apparently no one was directly responsible: so the law holds the plaintiff to the requirement of proving that the defendant was guilty of the negligence which caused the injury."

In concluding His Honor delivered a brief peroration, in which he said 'Law is the embodiment of human reason. It represents in logic all the knowledge of the ancients It is up to date in its compilation of human wisdom It calls and holds parties to an accountability according to common sense and reason."

Justice Hasbrouck instructed the jury to disregard a claim release which Trainor was obliged to sign in entering the employ of the Nitro company The jury retired at 4 15 Wednesday afternoon and was still out when court adjourned for the day at 6 o'clock.

LOOKING FOR WORK

Everywhere men complain about work; even boys and girls in school or business find work tedious and irksome, but it isn't the work half so much as their own lack of physical strength that makes it hard.

Rich blood, strong lungs and healthful digestion make work pleasurable in business, in school or even housework, and if those who are easily tired—who are not sick, but weak and nervous—would just take Scott's Emulsion for one month and let its pure concentrated food create richer blood to pulsate through every artery and vein—let it build a structure of healthy tissue and give you vigorous strength—you would find work easy and would look for more. Insist on Scott's.

CRESCENT FIVE WILL OPEN SEASON

Semi Professional Basketball to Begin Formally on Saturday Evening When Reorganized Crescents Meet Hudson Team.

The semi-professional basketball season will be formally opened in this city on Saturday evening, November 13, when the recently re-organized Crescent Club of Kingston will meet the crack Company F. five of Hudson.

The Crescent team which will represent this city in semi-professional basketball during the season of 1915-1916 is composed of the fastest talent to be secured in this vicinity, and that local followers of the Crescents will witness some fast games this year is a foregone conclusion.

The following well known players will make up the Crescent team: W. Dittus, R. F.; Robinson, L. F.; Spalt, C.; Pehleman, R. G.; Grobe, L. G.; and Butler utility man. Robinson and Grobe are fast men secured from Catskill, while the remainder are from this city, and all are well known and popular with the local fans. The players are practicing faithfully every evening at the hall and they expect to administer a defeat to the fast going Hudsonites on their visit to this town.

Both teams are about as evenly matched as it is possible to be, the records of last year showing that out of three games played between the two teams, the Crescents won two, the first by a 19 to 18 score at Hudson, and the second by a score of 24 to 23 in the final game played here last year. The Company F. team won the first game in this city by the score of 26 to 24.

The Hudson line-up will be the same as in former years, which includes Storms, L. F.; Garrison, R. F., Van Vliet, C.; Patterson, R. G.; and Dolan, L. G. Manager Broszio of the Hudson Club, claims his men are in perfect condition, having been playing for a month, and have had some hard games already and in his opinion his men are almost certain to hand the Crescents their first defeat.

The management of the local team are busy arranging their schedule of games to be played at home, and have already booked such well known teams as the Bay View Wheelman of Bay View, N. J., the Wanderers of Newark, N. J., the Seneca Club of Paterson, N. J., the Wanderer Five of Albany, the Mystics of Rensselaer, and clubs from several of the nearby towns.

Washington Hall, where the Crescent team will stage all their home games has changed ownership during the past year and the new proprietors have had the large dance hall throughout re-modeled and decorated throughout, so that at the present time the hall is one of the finest appearing in the city. The floor is the best in this vicinity for dancing, a new one having been installed during the summer. Besides the attraction of basketball novelty dances will be introduced, such as the flashing of varied colored lights on the dancers, masked balls, and illustrated song singing. Local talent as well as New York singers will be introduced.

McLean's well known orchestra of this city will furnish the music for dancing, which will follow the games, and also for the other events mentioned. A good time is assured to all who are fortunate enough to be in attendance at the games and novelty dances. The games will start promptly at 8:30 p. m.

KINGSTON, N. Y., NOV. 11, 1915.

We do not as yet possess sufficient information to enable us to determine what justification there was, if any, for the sinking of the steamer Ancona by an Austrian submarine, from the standpoint of international law. It is certain, however, that no excuse can be found in the code of civilized morality. The Ancona carried no contraband and had nothing to do with the war. Her destruction has not been of the slightest military advantage to the Teutons. On the contrary it has aroused intense hatred throughout Italy a country which up to this time has been fighting for what she could make out of it, but which will now be spurred on by stronger and more dangerous motives. Furthermore, the drowning of twenty seven American citizens who were going peacefully about their business is bound, if it does nothing more, to diminish still further what sentiment there is in this country in favor of Germany and Austria. The rulers of the latter countries appear to be possessed by insane folly. Every Zeppelin raid on London has strengthened the British army by bringing in new recruits. Moreover, the opinion of the neutral world, while it is of not much account just now, will be a mighty factor after the war. A reputation for brutality does not help one to get business, and it is a difficult task for merchants to explain that they are a tender-hearted folk, and that it is only their politicians who are bloodthirsty.

The curious workings of the minds of professional politicians are a never-failing source of wonder to "laymen." An example is the opinion expressed by several hundred experts that the defeat of the proposed Constitution in this State destroyed all chance for Elihu Root being elected to the Presidency, because he was the leader of the Convention. If this theory be correct, it should be a warning to all statesmen never to favor any reform or innovation of any kind, since such plans are so frequently beaten when first proposed. We observe that Former President Taft does not agree with the current opinion of the practical workers. He says that those three great reforms—the budget system, reform of judicial procedure, and the short ballot—although temporarily defeated are bound to prevail not only in New York, but in all the States. Consequently, the champion of these propositions cannot reasonably be said to be weakened in popular estimation. Mr. Taft, of course, is an idealist, and the party conventions next year are going to be conducted, as always, by men who are strong on practical politics but somewhat weak on vision. Considering everything, we regard it as improbable that Root will be nominated. He is almost too big for the job.

Commission government is to go into effect in Buffalo, Niagara Falls and Newburgh the first of the year, the commissioners who are to administer public affairs, supplanting councils, having been elected on Tuesday. The object of this form of [illegible] the centralization of authority and responsibility. With capable men in charge, a more businesslike administration may result, but the difficulty is in getting the right men. While the simplification of governmental machinery may make for efficiency and possibly economy, it may make instead for political control, easily obtained and maintained, more inimical to the interests of the people than is possible where different officials and bodies have their particular duties to perform and to some extent act as checks on one another. In the final analysis, the form of government will be found less important than the personnel of government. For a wise and efficient, progressive and yet economical administration, men of unquestioned integrity and ability are needed. Their selection depends on the interest and intelligence of the citizenship.

Woman suffrage is a good thing in its place and we are pleased to note that the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Diocese of New York has amended its law so that women may vote at church meetings "whenever so determined by any parish." It is well known that practically all church work is done by women and that they are constantly talking over church affairs, while men as a rule ignore these matters, being more likely to debate secular politics which, on the other hand, are of small interest to the average woman. It would be unprofitable to speculate at length on the psychological reasons for this difference between the sexes, but the fact is there and must be faced. No one can do the best work unless he is interested in his task and keeps his mind on it a good deal of the time. Shrewd employers know this and frequently discharge persons who have no love for their jobs. Just as it is best for men to have all the say in politics, it would be best for women to run the churches. We do not forget what St. Paul said on the subject of women keeping silence, but it is not for us to worry about that while the authorities of a great church remain calm.

LITTLE LAUGHS.

Actor—"Sir, I must say there is much finish about my work." Manager—"I don't doubt it. I can see yours now." Baltimore American.

"Buying on margin, a little money will go a long way in the stock market." "Yet it frequently goes so far you never see it again."—Boston Transcript.

The Rule—"You must never forget, my boy, that about one-third of all success is pure luck." "But how can you make sure of this luck?" "Why, by being successful."—Life.

Family Retainer—"Oh, sir, something terrible has 'appened. Your daughter, Miss Gwendolyn, has eloped with the chauffeur, sir, an' they're off in the motor car, sir." The Old Man—"Thank the Lord! Maybe I can save a little money, now that he girl and machine are both gone."—Puck.

"I wish to thank you for your great forbearance," said the departing guest. "Oh-er-don't mention it," answered the proprietor, with a slightly puzzled look. "I'm glad you're pleased." "Yes," continued the departing guest, "considering the capacity of the attendants in this hotel, I deem myself fortunate in not being locked in my room and held for ransom."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

It Pays to Advertise.

Not long ago a patron of a cafe in Chicago summoned his waiter and delivered himself as follows: "I want to know the meaning of this. Look at this piece of beef. See its size. Last evening I was served with a portion more than twice the size of this." "Where did you sit?" asked the waiter. "What has that to do with it? I believe I sat by the window." "In that case," smiled the waiter, "the explanation is simple. We always serve customers by the window large portions. It's a good advertisement for the place."—New York Globe.

One They Appreciated.

"That last thing you sent in was good," said the editor. "We all enjoyed reading it very much."

"Well, in that case," said the youthful poet, "I take back what I said in the letter I wrote to you yesterday about my determination never to send you any of my work again."

The editor slowly shook his head. "Don't do that," he murmured; "why that letter is what I referred to!"—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

An Exception.

When the enemy in the shape of a Zeppelin landed at Cramlington there was much consternation afoot, relates the Buffalo Commercial. One old man, however, proved the exception, for not many yards away he calmly sat and perused the evening paper, relates an exchange. When the noise had subsided he rose from his seat and dryly remarked: "I think I'll hev a look into the greenhouse to see if that last crack hasn't knocked some green fly off the rose bushes, for they're been rare pests lately, I'm sure."

Germany's Discontent.

"Germany says she was contented—she didn't want hegemony," said James Lathrop Beale, the Boston literateur and humorist.

"What hegemony is I don't exactly know, but Germany wanted it, all right, all right; and she wants it still; while as for Germany's contentment well, that reminds me of the tramp.

"A farmer had a barrel of cider in his back yard and on it he had put a placard:

"'This cider will be given to any man who is contented.'

"A tramp stopped and demanded the barrel of cider one day.

"'Are you contented?' asked the farmer.

"'Sure I'm contented,' said the tramp.

"'Then,' said the farmer, 'what are you pestering me for this barrel of cider for?'"—Boston Post.

HOW MACKEY WAS ACCIDENTALLY SHOT

Mettacahonts, Nov. 11.—One of the most dreadful accidents known to happen in this locality, happened to one of our well-known and well liked young men on Saturday, and caused the losing of his life. On Saturday afternoon Floyd Mackey, Ralph Emory and Elmer B. Hendrickson went hunting in the woods near Millbrook. They spent an enjoyable and as the sun was just down they started for their homes. They had reached Friend Wilklow's at Millbrook, on the main road, when a man whom they knew well, from out of town, came rattling around a turn in the road with team and heavy wagon. When he saw them to drew out of the road, and nearest to Mr. Mackey, who joked with him, and playfully raised his gun butt end upward. In lowering it the trigger hit some part of the wagon, either the box or the springs of the seat. The gun went off and one of the charges entered Mr. Mackey's abdomen, and also carried one of the shells out of his belt with it. With the words "I'm shot," he started across the road. Mr. Hendrickson picked him up and laid him down on the grass, and Mr. Emory went for Friend Wilklow, and he was lifted into his car and brought home. Dr. Pearl of Accord and Dr. Hanker of Kerhonkson were both called as soon as possible. As soon as they had examined the wound they ordered him taken at once to the Kingston City Hospital. He was taken to the 7:45 train on a couch in a car, and with Dr. Hanker, his brother, Oscar, and Jesse Osterhoudt, accompanying him, he made the journey. John Vandemark and Mr Hendrickson going with the car to bring the others back. He was hurried to the hospital, where he was at once operated on. No hope whatever was given for his recovery from the beginning and he passed away at 8 o'clock on Sunday morning.

It was a sad blow to the whole neighborhood, where he had spent the greater part of his life, and was well-liked by everyone, young and old. Always smart and industrious, and willing to help anyone. He leaves a vacant spot in the place that will be hard to fill. Always a cheery word for everyone was his rule through life. Never downhearted, always having a good time, in work or play, were qualities that he possessed Always willing to do all he could in entertainments for church and Sunday school, he will be much missed from our midst, especially by his young comrades. For he was always one of the jolliest. It is a sad blow to his father and mother, and brothers and sister. To his brother, Oscar, it falls especially hard, for they were near of an age and grew up together. He leaves to mourn his loss, his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Reuben Mackey, one sister, Mrs. A. Van Etten, and two brothers, Oscar and Edgar, all of this place. The heartfelt sympathy of the whole community is extended to the bereaved. He was twenty-eight years old last July.

The funeral was held from the school house on Wednesday afternoon. The casket was hidden in a bower of flowers from boy friends and other friends. It very largely attended by many from Leibhardt, Whitfield and Accord, whom he had always known, also many from Kerhonkson, showed the esteem in which he was held by all. The Rev. Mr. Frost, our minister, gave the funeral sermon, and spoke words of comfort to the friends who are left. Charles Bell, who left for New York city last Tuesday, arrived in this place on Tuesday evening. He came at once upon hearing of the death of his cousin and comrade, Mr. Mackey. When Mr. Bell left for New York last week he went rather sudden, and Mr. Mackey, hearing he was gone, at the last minute, jumped on his wheel and reached the station before the train went, and said goodbye to him.

LACKAWANNA'S NEW VIADUCT ©INTERNATIONAL FILM SERVICE

D. L. & W. $12,000,000 VIADUCT OPEN.

The Tunkhannock viaduct of the Lackawanna Railway is said to be the largest concrete railroad bridge in the world. It is between Clark's Summit and Halstead, Pa., on the main line from New York to Buffalo. It was begun in 1912 and cost $12,000,000. It is a half mile long and 100 feet higher than the roadway of Brooklyn Bridge.

By means of it 3.6 miles have been cut off the distance between New York and Buffalo. While this reduction in distance is comparatively slight it means a saving of about 20 minutes time in the passenger schedule between the two cities and about one hour's time for freight trains The heavy trains that formerly required five engines to pull them up the grade and around the sharp curves from Scranton to Binghamton, can now be drawn by two engines.

TWO CASES SENT OVER THE TERM

On the call of the calendar in supreme court this morning two of the three cases remaining to be tried at this term went over because of the inability of Amos Van Etten, as attorney in both actions, to be present tomorrow. No. 146, an action by Richard F Lang against William Van Brauer, Jr., was announced as ready. The cases which went over the term are Nos. 150 and 127, the former being a suit of George Moo[illegible] against Special C. Krag[illegible] for default, and the latter, a suit by the New York Central Railroad Company and another against Henry A. Mauerstock. Mr Van Etten is attorney for the plaintiff in each case.

When the calendar was called Mr. Van Etten said he had received word from the clerk of the United States district court in New York that a case he is to defend will come up at 10:30 o'clock tomorrow morning and therefore he could not proceed with cases 150 and 127 on Friday.

The Court: "I am obliged to admit that the call of the federal courts is superior in point of power to that of the state courts. I will not continue this term another week, and the cases will have to go over."

Mr Van Etten will represent the defendant in the federal court in an action brought by the Star Ball Players Company of Newark, N. J., against John J. Cuneo of Kingston to recover for an alleged infringement of a patent. An injunction is sought by the company.

Presbyterian Fair.

Friday is the day of the [illegible]ed Rondout Presbyterian fa[illegible] turkey dinner, salad supper and entertainment. In fact it would be an excellent plan to take your knitting and go to the artistically decorated chapel of the church tomorrow forenoon, about half past eleven o'clock, prepared to remain for the rest of the day. The candy booth at the fair will be in charge of the Westminster Guild, Miss Mary LeFevre, chairman. Miss Ella Van Deusen and Miss Althea Briggs will preside at the flower booth. The apron booth is under the supervision of Mrs. John Rowland, and "Mary's Garden" has as its keepers Mrs. Irving Scott and Miss Caroline Arnold, together with the members of the "Whatsoever Band." Mrs. Ellis has been in charge of the decorations and is also chairman of Circle No. 1, while Mrs. John Huhne and Miss Georgia Deudney are joint chairmen of Circle No. 2. Miss Katherine O. Van Keuren is president of the Ladies' Aid Society, which is giving the fair and feasts. Miss Ethel Manterstock, who will give readings during the first half of the evening's program, has chosen as her subjects, first a group, including "Wild, White Rose," by Fletcher; "A Gustatory Achievement," by Riley; "Georga Washindon," an Italian sketch; and "Winkin, Blinkin and Nod," by Fields. Later she will give a monologue, "Village Gossip," by Kate Douglas Wiggin. The cast of character, which will occupy the second half of the program, is as follows: Mrs. Adams, the borrower, Dorothy Bown; Mrs. Eaton, Marion Kingman; Mrs. Dent, Margaret Meeker; Mrs. Benton, Elizabeth Kingman; James Adams, Eric Brown; Susie Jenks, Elizabeth Brown.

Will of Andreas V. Haight.

The will of Andreas V. Haight, heard of a large printing establishment and former resident of Kingston, where for some years he was in the employ of The Freeman, has been admitted to probate in the Putchess county surrogate court. The petition states that the value of the estate is problematical and exceeds $5,000. The life use is given to Emily A. Haight, widow, and on her death the estate is to be divided share and share alike among the following children: Anna V. Briggs of Sherbrooke, Can. and Eleanor H. Arnold, William D. Haight and Lucia F. Halliwell of Poughkeepsie. The widow is named as the executrix and William Morgan Lee is her attorney. The will is dated May 11, 1905.

TURN OVER TIME

When Nature Hints About the Food.

When there's no relish to food and all that one eats doesn't seem to do any good then is the time to make a turn over in the diet, for that's Nature's way of dropping a hint that the food isn't the kind required.

"For a number of years I followed railroad work, much of it being office work of a trying nature. Most times were our busiest; and eating too much and too quickly of food such as is commonly served in hotels and restaurants, together with the sedentary habits, were not long in giving me dyspepsia and stomach trouble which reduced my weight from 205 to 160 pounds.

"There was little relish in any food and none of it seemed to do me any good. It seemed the more I ate the poorer I got and was always hungry before another meal, no matter how much I had eaten.

"Then I commenced a trial of Grape-Nuts food, and was surprised how a small saucer of it would carry me along, strong and with satisfied appetite, until the next meal, with no sensations of hunger, weakness or distress as before.

"I have been following this diet now for several months and my improvement has been so great all the others in my family have taken up the use of Grape-Nuts with complete satisfaction and much improvement in health.

"Most people eat hurriedly, have lots of worry, this hindering digestion and therefore need a food that is predigested and concentrated in nourishment."

"There's a Reason."

Economy Hints

A penny saved is a penny earned.—Benjamin Franklin.

IT is important that vegetables should be prepared and cooked in such a way as to conserve all the available food material and their mineral salts. The portion of the vegetable next to the skin contains the greater quantity of mineral matter, protein and fat; hence all thin skinned vegetables, such as new potatoes, carrots and vegetable oysters, should be scraped. Other vegetables should be pared as thinly as possible.

When the liquid in which the vegetables are cooked is drained off it carries with it much that is valuable. As far as possible this should be saved and used as the foundation for soups and sauces.

Vegetables should be cooked only until tender. Many vegetables develop a strong and an unpleasant flavor and are rendered less easily digested by overcooking. This is especially true of cabbage and cauliflower. When overcooked they also take on a reddish hue.

Strong flavored vegetables, such as onions, cabbage and turnips, should be cooked uncovered.

All vegetables should go over the fire in boiling water.

Fresh, succulent vegetables should always be put to cook in salted water. Old vegetables that have become somewhat tough should have the salt added a few minutes before the cooking is finished.—Good Health.

CHILD TRAINING.

How to Suggest a Good Disposition to Your Children.

A principle of psychology which every mother should know is that the last thought before going to sleep makes the deepest impression. The last thought at night is sure to be the first waking thought. A child should never be punished just before going to bed if you wish to create in him a joyous disposition. A happy bedtime will mean a sunny morning face.

Another important fact, based more upon physiological than upon psychological principles, is the importance of a happy meal time. Perhaps the child has done some little naughty thing and is scolded for it until he cries or is sent from the table. His dinner is spoiled. He needs that dinner. He cannot be happy if he is hungry or if he feels undue censure, and he will be cross or depressed all the afternoon.

Did you ever indulge in weeping at meal time or allow yourself to become very angry? If so did you find your digestion improved, and did you have a happy day? As it was with you so is it with the child.

It is a well known physiological fact that anger and grief interfere seriously with digestion. If you wish to lay in your child a foundation for indigestion you can find no more effective way.—Mother's Magazine.

How to Get All Household Articles In Working Order.

Are you the only mechanism in your household that is strictly on the job? Why are not the other cogs in the domestic machinery working full blast? You bought them to give you pleasure or save your strength. Are they doing it? That lamp in the library is only faintly ornamental. You use the gas instead because the lamp has a dim light and a bad odor. Give it a chance to work. A well fitted chimney, a clean burner boiled once a week in soapsuds, a good wick trimmed carefully every morning and pure kerosene. The clock on the parlor mantel never tells the exact time. Send a card to the store where it was bought. After they have regulated it keep it dusted, wound and set properly. Place it where you can see it from as many rooms as possible. Sharpen your dull pencils, hang one with the grocery list, put another in the machine drawer and another handy to the couch where you rest during the afternoon.

How to Remove Tea and Coffee Stains From Table Linen.

Tea or coffee stains on the napkins or tablecloths are easily removed if you go about it in the proper way. When next potatoes are boiled strain the water and save it. Then pour the water into a clean white bowl and dip the stained part of the linen into it. Allow the linen to stand in the water until the spots disappear. Then launder the linen as usual.

If the potato water fails to take the stains out try ammonia or alcohol. Give the spots a liberal dose of either and rub out well. Rinse very carefully before putting into the wash.

When the piece has gone through the various tubbings, bluings, etc., and has been ironed you will find there is no trace left of the ugly spots.

How to Keep Your Evening Gown Fresh as New.

To keep evening gowns fresh it is a good plan to hang them inside a large muslin bag. Turn the dress inside out and through tape loops stitched at intervals inside the waistband draw a strip of muslin about an inch wide. The ends of the strip may be hooked or tied together and hung on the hook with the drawing string of the bag. This will prevent the dress from dragging at the loops, as so often happens.

KINGSTON DOCTOR SEEKS $1,000 FEE

Dr. Mark O'Meara Alleges Representatives of New York Central Contracted With Him For Care of William N. Anderson, One of Victims of Binnewater Collision, in February, 1914.

Following the retirement of the jury in the case of William Trainor against the Nitro Powder Co. in the supreme court before Justice G. D. B. Hasbrouck late Wednesday afternoon, a jury was drawn to hear the case of Dr. Mark O'Meara, a well-known Kingston physician and surgeon, against the New York Central Railroad Co. to recover $1,000 for professional services. Dr. O'Meara, chief of staff of physicians in the Benedictine Sanitarium, cared for and with the assistance of other physicians operated upon William N. Anderson, who sustained a fracture of both legs, his arms and skull early on the morning of February 13, 1914, when a stage he was driving was struck by a train on the Wallkill Valley division at Binnewater. A party of young persons of Kingston were in the stage, returning from a social gathering, and several were injured, a few fatally. The New York Central has a contract with the Kingston City Hospital and most of the injured persons were taken to this institution. Anderson, the driver, at his request, was removed to the Benedictine Sanitarium, where he died on the 20th.

Dr. Mark O'Meara contends that he was instructed by a claim agent for the New York Central, the latter telephoning from the Stuyvesant Hotel, to care for Anderson, and that it was promised in behalf of the railroad company that his bill would be paid.

Appearing for the plaintiff is City Judge N. Frank O'Reilly with Andrew J. Cook of counsel. The New York Central is represented by Amos Van Etten.

At the opening of the case Mr. Van Etten moved for a dismissal because the complaint in the action simply stated Dr. O'Meara attended Anderson "by request." He read authorities showing that a railroad company cannot be held liable for professional services rendered by a third party unless there is a specific contract.

Judge O'Reilly—"We expect to prove there was such a contract."

The Court—"The complaint ought to state the express promise alleged."

Judge O'Reilly—"I suppose the words 'promised and agreed to pay' should be added."

The court permitted the complaint to be amended accordingly. Harry N. Downs, chief claim agent; W. C. Freeman and E. T. Jones were among the railroad representatives said by the plaintiff to be involved directly or indirectly in the making of the agreement with the physician.

Attorney Cook, in opening the case, said that Dr O'Meara previously had had some trouble in collecting bills from the railroad. When Anderson was taken to the sanitarium the doctor found that an operation would be necessary, as the only possible means of saving the man's life. He called up by 'phone the Stuyvesant Hotel, where several claim agents stopped, following the Binnewater accident, and talked with one of the agents whom he had met before. The doctor asked whether if he took care of Anderson the railroad would pay and was assured it would. However, when he sent in his bill, which covered an operation in which he was assisted by Drs. O'Leary, Snyder and Gates, it was turned down.

Mr. Van Etten for the defense said the New York Central has two surgeons in Kingston and one of them, Dr. Stern, asked for and received permission from the Benedictine authorities to visit Anderson. The lawyer said he had never heard of any promise being made to pay Dr. O'Meara. He said the physician on a number of occasions has come forward with bills against the railroad, which has settled or compromised them with reluctance, because as it claims it had not called for his services, but it has now decided not to accept any more such bills from him.

Claim Agent Freeman on Stand.

Waldo C. Freeman, called as the first witness, has been a claim agent for the New York Central since October, 1910, and at the time of the Binnewater accident his territory extended from Jersey City to Kingston. Following the collision he immediately came here, as did Downs, Jones and several other gaents, all stopping at the Stuyvesant. He saw various persons who were injured and settled cases. Witness, questioned by Judge O'Reilly, admitted having telephoned to the Benedictine Sanitarium several mornings to inquire as to the condition of Anderson.

Cross-examined by Mr. Van Etten, Freeman declared that he did not, nor did anyone in his presence, promise in behalf of the railroad to pay Dr. O'Meara for the care of Anderson.

Plaintiff Takes the Stand.

Dr. O'Meara, who has had 20 years' experience as a physician and surgeon, testified that on February 15, three days after the accident, when Anderson's condition was critical, he called up the Stuyvsant and talked with Freeman regarding the case. The doctor told the claim agent he had had difficulty in collecting bills from the railroad and asked for some assurance his bill in this case would be paid. Witness quoted Freeman: "We are in quite a mixup, and you go ahead and in all probability it will be all right." This was not satisfactory to Dr. O'Meara, who says that then Freeman told him to hold the wire while he spoke to Chief Agent Downs, and when the telephoning was resumed Freeman said for the doctor to go ahead with the case; that it would be all right.

Dr. O'Meara said his bill covered his services and those of the physicians who assisted him in the operation, also the bill of the Benedictine Sanitarium, the latter being $88.

In cross-examination, Mr. Van Etten confronted the witness with a bill for $600 in this case, sent to and rejected by Claim Agent Downs.

High Fees For Operations.

Witness said Anderson was in the hospital for six days and he was operated on on the third day, the operation requiring an hour and a half. He said the institution has on an average of 30 to 35 patients. Asked about high fees, the doctor said he had received as much as $1,000 for an operation within the past year. The patient was Mrs. Northum, under treatment for two and a half weeks, who has a summer home in Ellenville. Dr. O'Meara told of another case some years ago in which his fee for the operation was $800.

Under questioning by the attorney for the defense, the witness said he charged as much for his professional knowledge and judgment as for his work. He said it is a rule of the Benedictine staff of physicians and surgeons not to accept fees unless or until the sanitarium is paid for room rent and nursing, this explaining why his bill to the New York Central included the hospital's charge. The doctor denied that any bill had been rendered Anderson's widow.

Mr. Van Etten desiring explicit information of the time Anderson was in the hospital and of the time Dr. O'Meara devoted to his case, a subpoena of the records of the sanitarium was ordered issued, and at 6.30 Wednesday evening court took an adjournment until this morning with the plaintiff still on the stand.

The Sign of The Perfect Baking Powder

Here are the names of more than fifty grocers in Kingston and vicinity, every one a distributer of RYZON, The Perfect Baking Powder. These merchants are conscientious, painstaking dispensers of high-grade food products. Knowing the baking situation as we do, we feel sure that these grocers could not be induced to stock and sell a new baking powder, as yet practically unknown to the public, unless it had unquestionably superior merits for the consumer.

The grocers in this list are familiar with the fact that the food authorities of this country have long been demanding a better, purer, more wholesome baking powder. They are satisfied that RYZON is such a baking powder. And because of the fact that RYZON meets all requirements of the most exacting food scientists, these grocers have welcomed the opportunity to co-operate in putting The Perfect Baking Powder into the homes of Kingston and neighboring towns.

The approval of RYZON by pure food authorities is important, but the fact that leading cooking experts have also endorsed it is equally important. These experts say that RYZON is the most wholesome and successful baking powder they have ever tried.

RYZON is sold in quarter, half and pound cans at 10, 18 and 35 cents. Anyone can purchase a can of RYZON from any grocer on this list with the unqualified guarantee that RYZON will prove entirely satisfactory in every way or money will be refunded without question.

Before the Gasoline Age.

It is curious to recall that some seventy years ago Herbert Spencer was hoping to take out a patent for a "flying machine." Only he had given up as hopeless the problem since solved by the aeroplane, regarding it as impossible to carry the motor engine and motor power required for a long flight. His idea was suggested by the principle of the kite and involved the drawing through the air of an inclined plane by iron wire cords attached to an endless wire rope moved by stationary engines. The fatal flaw was the impracticable weight of the wire rope, and the one good feature of the scheme was that it would have been of little or no use for war. [illegible] Globe.

Kingstonian BOILERS

We Want to Talk Heating With You

But mind you, we are not going to ask you to buy a single thing. All we want is just the chance to tell you what little we know about the strong points about this Kingstonian Boiler we are selling.

After we have told them to you if that boiler doesn't sell itself to you, all we could ever say between now and next question wouldn't move you an inch.

But just bear this in mind: no matter what "system" you install, the boiler is the vital thing.

If you want to come around and talk it over this evening, we'll stay down.

"Get a copy of the leading paper of your town of twenty years ago and compare it with today's edition of the same paper.

"You may not detect any remarkable improvement in the handling of the editorial or news matter.

"The thing that will impress you most is the quantity and quality of the advertising.

"The paper is vibrant with intense merchandising activity.

"There is freshness, timeliness and originality in the advertising.

"The copy has 'news' interest.

Bacon and Wealth.

I cannot call riches better than the baggage of virtue; the Roman word is better, "impedimenta:" for as the baggage is to the army, so is riches to virtue; it cannot be spared nor left behind, but it hindereth the march; yea, and the care of it sometimes loseth or disturbeth the victory; of great riches there is no real use, except it be in the distribution; the rest is but conceit.—Bacon.

CALL AT 1818 WALL FOR "REMBRANDTS"

Since the arrest and remanding to jail of Fred W. Wilson and Clarence A. Meigs on Wednesday, the former being held to await arrival of extradition papers from Florida where he is wanted on a charge of forgery, and the latter sentenced to pay a fine of $20 or spend twenty days in the county jail for doing business under a fictitious name, police headquarters has been besieged by the patrons of the young men who have been working the city the past ten days soliciting orders for enlarging photographs, asking if the police could not return them their photographs and deposits of money made to the young men at the time they placed their orders with them.

At the time the police arrested the young men it was done at the request of the Jacksonville, Florida, authorities who sincerely wished to get in touch with Wilson. The other young man, Meigs, was also arrested by the police as a suspicious character by reason of being associated with Wilson. There was no evidence that the young men were defrauding the residents of Kingston, but at the time they were arrested it was learned that they were doing business under a fictitious name, "The Rembrandt Art Institute of Chicago, Ill.," and had failed to register the name with the county clerk's office as required by law.

It was also found, according to the police, that the young men were signing fictitious names to the receipts given to customers. Wilson signed his name as "C. V. Ross," while Meigs signed his name "Robertson."

As there is, so far, no evidence to warrant the police in believing that Meigs or Wilson were swindling local residents it would seem that the patrons of the young men have the privilege of calling on them at their present abode in the county jail and learning from their lips just when they may expect the work ordered to be finished. As Wilson will be taken to Florida as soon as extradition papers arrive the local customers will probably find it more convenient to call on Mr. Meigs at 1818 Wall street as it would prove rather a costly trip to go to Florida to communicate personally with Mr. Wilson.

Unless Mr. Meigs pays the fine imposed he may be found at 1818 Wall street for the remaining nineteen days.

The two young women who live in Syracuse, who accompanied the young men to Kingston, informed Chief Wood that they expected to return to their homes as soon as they could raise the price of the carfare home. They have got in touch with relatives and expect a remittance shortly. They are aged 25 and 22 years respectively.

COURT REVERSES MOLYNEAUX CASE

The appellate division of the supreme court on Wednesday handed down a decision in the case of Elmer E. Molyneaux, respondent, against The Co-operative Building Bank, appellant, which was tried some time ago before Judge Hasbrouck, who rendered judgment in favor of Mr. Molyneaux.

Mr. Molyneaux in December, 1894, applied for membership and stock in the building bank. The stock matured on October 27, 1908, and after that date Mr. Molyneaux gave notice of withdrawal. The articles of association provided that a withdrawing stockholder of matured stock may not get his money until the loan fund contained a sufficient amount to pay his shares out. There were withdrawals ahead of Mr. Molyneaux to the amount of $111,000, of matured and unmatured stock. In October, 1908, and for some time before there had not been enough money in the loan fund to pay such shares of stock as there were claims against the fund.

The building bank claimed that Molyneaux and all other stockholders were governed by the articles of association. On the part of Mr. Molyneaux it was claimed that the action could be maintained under the banking law of the state, which provides that where applications or demands have been on file and remain wholly or in part unpaid for two years, the state superintendent of banks may take possession of the assets until the affairs are finally liquidated

The case was tried before Judge Hasbrouck early last spring and he held that the implication of the banking law was a command to pay within two years and that there should be judgment for the sum remaining unpaid on Mr. Molyneaux's shares, with interest.

The building bank appealed to the appellate division, which has reversed the judgment and directed that judgment be entered in favor of the defendant dismissing the complaint with costs. The opinion in the case was written by Judge Howard and all the other judges of the court concur Brinnier & Canfield were attorneys for Mr. Molyneaux and Lexow, Mackellar & Wells for the defendant company.

The decision will be of interest in the town of Shandaken, where several of Mr. Molyneaux's neighbors are said to have become stockholders of the building bank and later applied to withdraw.

A GREAT INSTITUTION

In the days before the Want Columns were invented, the merchant used to wait for the customers whom he knew were sure to come to him, but now, in these days of Want Ad advertising, things are different.

The merchant knows that he must advertise in order to bring the people to his place of business, for he knows they read the Freeman Wants to find out where to go to make their purchases.

So, in the columns of this great institution of the Freeman Want Ads, you will find scattered here and there the ads of merchants crying their wares. This proves that the business man realizes the popularity of the Freeman Wants.

The Iscaria Steel Works

A Story Illustrating the Difference Between the Old and the New.

By JOHN Y. LARNED

There are in Europe a number of petty kingdoms, principalities and dukedoms that in the various changes of the map which have occurred during ten or a dozen centuries have for one cause or another been left out of the great divisions. One of these is the duchy of Iscaria, which several centuries ago, on readjusting the boundary between Italy and Austria, became independent. It consists of seventeen square miles in a mountainous region, the capital, Arancon, lying in a beautiful valley in the center of the dukedom. This little state has always maintained all the ceremony of an empire. The duke, being a reigning sovereign, associates on equal terms with the crowned heads of the world. He has a prime minister and a cabinet, and his army numbers 400 men. On state occasions he sits on a throne and wears a crown. The royal family, being members of the family circle, find it difficult to gather about them sufficient persons within the dukedom of high enough rank to form a court society.

Bob Anderson was a young American whose grandfather had established a foundry which had grown to be the Pemberton Steel company. Bob a few years ago came of age to find himself the sole owner of these extensive works. He retained the control of the concern, but there was an efficient manager who relieved the owner of the responsibility.

The young man, having a taste for adventure, on completing his education set out to see the world. During three years he traveled, returning only at long intervals to satisfy himself that all was going well with his steel works, for he had inherited from his father a natural gift for administrative action. He not only knew what kind of man to get to carry out his ideas, but took care to make an examination of what he was doing at such intervals as he deemed essential. After each investigation he would start out again on another ramble.

One day Bob found himself in Arancon, the capital of Iscaria. It happened to be a field day, and the reigning duke, Michael III., reviewed his army. Bob tried to hire a presentable livery rig in which to view the spectacle, but found everything engaged except the most rattletrap cab in the dukedom. He was obliged to be content with this and drove on to the grounds where the review was to take place.

During the ceremonies Bob's cabby got on to grounds reserved for royalty, and his old trap, desecrating a space on which stood the splendid equipage of the duchess, was ordered off by a policeman. Bob slipped a fistful of gold pieces into the man's hand, who straightaway, pretending that there was no way for the cab to get out of the tangle of vehicles, permitted him to remain. The duchess looked daggers at the official and at Bob, but said nothing.

Beside the wife of the sovereign was her daughter, Eudoxia. There was something so discordant between the cab and the carriage in which she sat that she could not repress a smile. That smile brought a resolve to the American to show her royal highness that he was used to better equipages than a cab that was ready for the scrap heap.

Now, the dukedom of Iscaria was like a Parisian shop, where about all the stock is in the window. The duke was financially the poorest sovereign in Europe His territory, being mountainous was unproductive, and his subjects were gradually going elsewhere to make a living. Smarting under the young duchess' smile at his rig, Bob, as soon as the troops had passed, returned to his hotel to think over a plan whereby he might show those impoverished royalties that he was able to ride in as fine a coach as they. The result of his thought and investigation was as follows:

Through the city of Arancon ran a mountain torrent directly before the hotel in which Bob was stopping. While cogitating a plan to show his power through his wealth he was looking on this stream.

"I have it," he said suddenly. "That's a splendid water power. I will line the stream with mills. I will show these people that I can turn the flow of emigration to immigration. I will build up the dukedom. Then I will ride through the capital in a donkey cart if I choose and they will have something to laugh at."

Anderson spent some time inquiring what manufacture would be best suited to the locality and found that there were undeveloped iron mines in mountains near by that were very rich. His first move was to buy a large tract of land on both sides of the waterway below the city. Then he sent to America for a corps of engineers and mechanics, and buildings began to go up, enormous dams were constructed, and machinery by the hundreds of tons began to arrive.

Meanwhile the builder of this water power plant went off on his travels, leaving instructions with his managers that they should keep the ownership a secret. The duke, seeing what was being done, sent his grand chamberlain to inquire what it all meant. He was told that the Iscaria Steel company was building a plant to smelt the iron to be taken from the mines in the mountains, but as to who or what was the Iscaria Steel company the chamberlain was given no satisfaction.

The building of the works, the opening of the mines, caused the influx of workmen to the capital. A park was laid out a few miles from the city, but near the plant, on which long rows of laborers' cottages sprang, as it seemed, out of the ground. Hundreds of men who had left their families to go elsewhere in search of employment returned. It seemed as if Iscaria had been dead and some unseen power had breathed into it the breath of a new life.

The government reaped a substantial pecuniary benefit. Those who were in arrears for their taxes paid them, and there were thousands more to be taxed. The duke discarded the tarnished tinsel of a hundred years and purchased new and modern articles. The duchess and Eudoxia sent to Paris for gowns of the latest fashion. Families of the head men of the steel company came to live at the capital, and a social circle was formed similar to that existing in the capital of a democratic monarchy.

But who was at the bottom of this prosperity? No one but the president of the steel company knew, and he would not tell. But what had been done was only the beginning. The large force that was employed in opening the mines, preparing the water power for use, building the vast city of machine shops, was as nothing to the influx of workmen that took place on the completion of the plant and the commencement of manufacture. Certain property belonging to the crown was sold in town lots, bringing in a sum of money that enabled the reigning sovereign to pay his debts and invest the balance at an interest that brought him a truly ducal revenue.

Shortly before the works were started Robert Anderson returned to the capital, bringing letters of certain persons influential in various governments to members of the cabinet of Iscaria. Being a young man of good appearance, tall and well built, he progressed rapidly in a social way in the court circle. He made no display of wealth, dressed plainly, and no one suspected that he was very rich. One of the important functions he attended was a ball at the palace, the first given since the royal ladies had put off their old fashioned gowns and appeared in their Parisian costumes. Anderson was taken to the royal family for introduction and, on giving place to others before the sovereign, joined the young Duchess Eudoxia.

"It seems to me," she said, "that I have seen you before somewhere."

"And your highness' face is familiar to me," replied Bob.

"I have it," said the lady. "I saw you at the last review of the troops."

The remembrance of his rattletrap cab brought back the smile that Bob had seen on that occasion. It was a becoming smile, and now that Bob had prepared the way for his revenge he returned the smile in kind.

"The steel works are to be opened tomorrow," he replied. "I confess that my equipage was out of place at the review of the army. Tomorrow it will be more appropriate. We Americans are representatives of commerce and manufacture. We do not put on much style."

"The court attends the inaugural ceremony. My father has been invited to press the electric key that starts the machinery.

"I shall be present."

Anderson passed on, but after the brief interview with her highness Eudoxia had no further interest in the assembly and soon took his departure.

The next day a procession of the managers and the operatives of the Iscaria Steel company started from a given point and marched to the building where the duke was to press the electric key. The route led them past the palace, and the young duchess viewed it from a balcony. At the head of the procession, in the same rattletrap cab in which he had attended the review, was Bob Anderson Next behind him was the president of the steel works. Following them were the managers of the different departments and their subordinates. Last came the vast body of workmen.

What Anderson's presence at the head of the procession meant Eudoxia was at a loss to know. She descended to a carriage waiting below and was driven to the building where her father was to open the works Shortly after her arrival the managers entered, followed by representatives of the workmen. Two seats were placed on the platform, one on each side of the electric key. Anderson took the one on the left. When, in a few minutes, the duke entered Anderson arose and, with a profound bow, said:

"I feel honored, your royal highness, that you have consented to open the plant that I have built in your dukedom. May it give work to your people when I shall have passed to another existence!"

The duke, not wishing to betray his astonishment before so many people, bowed and pressed the key.

The Duchess Eudoxia rose from her seat in the royal compartment and left the hall. What prompted her to do this before the ceremonies were finished was not known. The next day Bob Anderson, hearing that Mount Aetna was sending up a column of flame and smoke, left the capital for Sicily.

Nevertheless there is a report that the Duke of Iscaria has offered to make Ned a baron and give him the hand of his daughter in order to secure Ned's vast wealth. It is also rumored that Ned is willing to accept the daughter, but not the title.

Grand in Its Ruins.

On Calton hill, Edinburgh, stands the most remarkable unfinished building in Britain. It is far more beautiful and striking in its unfinished state than it ever could be if completed. It gives Edinburgh the appearance of ancient Athens. It was to be a memorial of the Royal Scots and was first talked of the year after Waterloo. However, the original plans were so modified that enthusiasm petered out, and the national monument remains today a magnificent fragment.—London Express.

CHARRED AND BOLTED DOOR, BROOKLYN FIRE ©INTERNATIONAL FILM SERVICE.

BOLT WHICH TRAPPED FIRE VICTIMS.

This picture shows the locked bolt and part of the charred trap door between the third and fourth floors of the Brooklyn factory building in which twelve lives were lost on Saturday. The screws fastening the bolt can be plainly seen. Most of those who were burned to death were caught behind this trap door and were unable to open it. It was finally pried from its hinges, but too late to save most of those caught behind it. The door is being held as evidence in the investigation to fix the responsibility for the loss of life.

Keeping the Pavement Stirred.

Workmen in the employ of the city are busy repairing and placing the catch basins on lower Broadway at Mill street for the winter. ## THE CURIOUS KANGAROO.

A Theory Its Queer Style of Animal Architecture Suggests.

The kangaroo family is unique and is found only in Australia. It is the most remarkable branch of the order of the marsupials, or pouched animals, the pouch being a kind of pocket in which the young are nourished and protected for a long time after birth. The opossum is an example of a marsupial inhabiting America, but it bears no outward resemblance to a kangaroo.

The marsupials arose in very ancient geological times somewhere in the mesozoic age, and later on nearly disappeared except in Australia and neighboring islands, where today they constitute the characteristic native fauna.

There is one curious fact about the kangaroo which appears all the more singular when we reflect upon the great antiquity of the order of the marsupials. It almost looks as if this extraordinary Australian animal represents a survival of a style of animal architecture which was once a favorite with nature, but has since been abandoned.

The frames of these creatures are characterized by an enormous development of the posterior parts, including gigantic tails and massive thighs and hind legs. If any of the dinosaurs had a leaping power comparable with that of the kangaroo the terror inspired by their forms must have been matched by that arising from their movements.—New York Journal.

HIS DAY OF REST.

A Town In France Where a Legal Holiday Is Strictly Observed.

The jeweler's face expressed bewilderment and astonishment and amusement. He looked from the artist to me and back again at the artist. He started at the end of every sentence to say something, but the artist didn't give him a chance. The artist kept on talking, while I kept on trying to control my sense of humor. I wanted to shriek. I longed for the ability to write shorthand, so that I could put it all down for posterity.

The artist had left a watch to be mended, and we were standing in front of the jeweler's shop on one of the narrow streets of Douarnenez, a town in the extreme west of France. The shutters were up in front of the shop, and the jeweler was in his shirt sleeves, looking as if he had been waked up by our knock from an enjoyable after-dejeuner sleep. The artist and I were leaving by the 3.15 train for Pont Croix, and we didn't intend to come back this way. It was Thursday, but the jeweler had politely explained that he could not give us the watch until tomorrow, although it was all ready and was hanging from its little hook in the shop at whose open door we stood. The reason was that Thursday had been chosen by the jeweler for his repos hebdomadaire—the one day in seven rest imposed by law.—Herbert Adams Gibson in Harper's Magazine.

SOCIETY NOTES.

Mr. and Mrs. William James Turner of 214 Paige street, Schenectady, announce the engagement of their daughter, Jessie May, to Carroll Dumond Myers of Kingston.

A linen shower was given Miss Jessie C. Dingman at her home, No. 10 Baker street, Poughkeepsie, on Tuesday evening in honor of her approaching marriage to Charles C. Mason of Kerhonkson.

The members of the Winners Class of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church held a banquet on Wednesday evening at the home of Frank Hyatt, No. 70 Fair street, which was followed by a social hour. The event was one of the most successful social affairs ever held by the class which numbers one hundred now of the church in it membership.

The annual old fashioned dance of the St. Peter's Sick and Aid Society was held on Wednesday evening in St. Peter's school hall and was an unqualified success. Delightful music for dancing was rendered by the St. Peter's orchestra of five pieces. During the evening refreshments were served. The dance was one of the most successful social events of the season.

Mrs. A. Brunaghim of No. 112 Tremper avenue entertained the members of her Sunday school class, the Pearl Gatherers, of the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church, at her home on Wednesday evening. A delightful time was enjoyed, playing games and singing. At a late hour a buffet lunch was served. Among those present were Mrs. M. W. Schepmoes, teacher of the class; Mrs. A. Taylor, Mrs. D. Hicks, Mrs. A. Eckert, Mrs. L. Brunaghim, Mrs. E. K. Simpson, Mrs. C. P. Auringer, Mrs. S. Hyatt, Mrs. William Dietz and Mrs. C. Lord.

The Bazaar and dance given by the Loyal Friends Aid Society at St. Mary's Hall ended Wednesday night and proved one of the most enjoyable events of the season. The young ladies handiwork together with the donations of their many friends was eagerly purchased and a goodly sum realized, which will be used for purely philanthropic purposes. The young society has become affiliated with the Bureau of Social Service by taking a sustaining membership and will refer all its cases to that organization for investigation before giving relief.

The regular meeting of the Soikanishade Club was held Monday afternoon with Mrs. Hull, at her home on Main street. Current events were given in response to roll and an enjoyable discussion followed. The principal paper of the day, on William Cullen Bryant, was by Mrs. G. L. Rice. Instead of her short paper on the San Francisco fair, Mrs. Hull invited her house guest, Mrs. Turck, to speak on that subject. Mrs. Turck had spent some time at the exposition, going through the Panama Canal, and returning by way of the Great Northwest. She spoke very entertainingly of the interesting features. The next meeting will be on November 15, with Mrs. Leighton, 6 St. James Court. The program will be "Things Worth Knowing." Principal paper, "H. W. Longfellow," by Mrs. Hull. Short paper, "Life Saving Service," by Mrs. K. E. Leighton.

Y. Pale yellow and white chrysanthemums and ferns, palms and ferns were used in profusion as decorations. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mr. Cameron, rector of the Episcopal Church, Rosendale. The bride was handsomely gowned in a robe of white lace over taffeta and wore a white chiffon hat. She carried bride roses. She was attended by her sister, Miss Lulu Mollenhauer, who wore a charming costume of green taffeta and chiffon and carried pale yellow chrysanthemums. The wedding music was that of violin and piano and was very pleasing. The best man was Wallace Webb of Kingston. Y.; Mrs. Mary Haskin, and Warren Churchill of New York city.

Klothe-Clarke.

The residence of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Clarke on Ten Broeck avenue was the scene Wednesday evening of a charming and impressive home wedding, when at six o'clock, Miss Nellie Clarke, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke, was united in marriage to Harry Klothe of this city. Palms, ferns, other foliage, pink and white chrysanthemums and Killarney roses formed the decorations, being artistically grouped as a background to the bridal party during the ceremony which was performed by the Rev. Arthur M. Cole, pastor of the Albany Avenue Baptist Church, assisted by the Rev. Sherman Seyfort of Renova, Penn. Miss Jessie M. Slater of Cohoes, N. Y., presided at the piano, playing the bridal chorus from Lohengrin, "O! Promise Me," during the ceremony; and Mendelssohn's wedding march after the service. The bride was most charmingly in her lovely bridal gown of white crepe de chene over taffeta, trimmed with charmeuse and chantilly lace. She carried bride roses. Following the ceremony and congratulations offered by the immediate friends and families of the bride and groom, a sumptuous collation was served. The gifts were very numerous and handsome, including a tea service of silver-mounted art pottery, the gift of the bride's friends at the Lace Curtain Mills, where for the past ten years she has been employed in the office. The groom has been for some thirteen years connected with the West Shore Railroad. During the evening, Mr. and Mrs. Klothe, both of whom have a wide circle of admiring friends in this city left for a Canadian wedding journey. On their return they will reside at No. 176 O'Neil street, where a newly furnished home awaits them. Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Burke of Newark, N. J.; the Rev. Sherman Seyfert of Renova, Penn.; Miss Jessie M. Slater and Miss Eva M. Holt of Cohoes, N. Y., and Gertrude Triller of Poughkeepsie.

Atharbaction Club.

On Wednesday afternoon, the Atharbaction Club met at the home of Mrs. Robin Stelle on Clinton avenue. During the business session, Mrs. E. E. Fessenden was elected a new member of the club. The afternoon's program was opened with a lively discussion of current topics, educational matters and this government's foreign relations having the lion's share of consideration. Mrs. Stelle had the paper for the day, her subject being, "The American Kipling," Robert Service. After giving a brief sketch of the poet's life, Mrs. Stelle considered his works. An Englishman, making his home in Canada, he is essentially the poet of the far north. Under the spell of the Yukon, and in close touch with the almost primitive life of the lumber camps, etc., this writer's verse is marked by both vigorous and roughness of diction, perhaps marking Service as Kipling-like in his writings. His poems are both narrative and nature poems, often abounding in both humor and pathos, and always full of vigor. A letter, written to Mrs. Winne by a personal friend of Service was read and found interesting, and a number of his poems illustrated the points in the paper, which was excellent. The club will meet next week with Mrs. King.

The Butterfly Ball.

Plans for the butterfly ball which will be held at the armory December 9 for the building fund of the Kingston City Hospital are now well under way. It has already been announced that Lada, the famous interpretive dancer, has volunteered her services to make the ball a success. While this in itself is enough to draw the enthusiastic interest of all artistic and dance-loving people of the community, an additional attraction is promised in the engaging of Irail Godoskov, a young Russian dancer, whose art has been perfected under the most famous teachers of his own country. This promising young artist is a protege of Lada and has been engaged at her suggestion to dance with her and also in solo work. Godeskov is young, handsome, lithe and graceful. A few Kingston people who had an opportunity of seeing him dance this summer at a private entertainment report that his art [illegible] them. One of the most beautiful of his original dances is called "The Awakening of Spring," and it is with this that he will open the program of the butterfly ball. ## Growth Builders For Children

Most mothers and housekeepers should give much more time than they do to the study of what is the right food for their children. It is a foregone conclusion that the young child needs plenty of pure, rich milk, but the time comes when milk should be supplemented by other food. Many mothers err in one of two directions, either in depriving their children of simple nourishing food, which is so necessary to the building up of nerves and muscle, or in overfeeding their youngsters.

When your child reaches the age of fifteen months it is extremely important that he has three good meals a day, with a glass of milk between dinner and supper and at bedtime.

Breakfast may be served at 8 o'clock. It may include stewed fruit or orange juice, cereal, an egg, bread and butter and milk.

Your child should have his chief meal between 12 and 1. This should include a meat or vegetable soup, a small amount of meat, a chop or small piece of rare steak shredded, baked potatoes, two vegetables and a simple dessert.

BREAKFAST.
Stewed Fruit or Orange Juice.
Cereal. Alternate, Soft Boiled or Poached Egg.
Bread and Butter or Toast.
Milk or Weak Cocoa.

DINNER.
Meat or Vegetable Soup Thickened With Cereal.
Lamb Chop, Scraped Beef or Chicken.
Beef Juice.
Baked or Mashed Potato.
Strained Spinach, Carrots, Peas or Celery.
Gelatin, Custard or Cornstarch Pudding.

SUPPER.
Bread and Milk or Cereal.
Baked Apple or Apple Sauce.

After your child is a year old you can continue the usual amount of milk you are accustomed giving him, but it is no less important that he have a mixed diet. The breakfast foods, especially oatmeal, farina and boiled rice, are extremely important for the building of the body. Since these foods are sustaining and rather filling, they should be given at breakfast and supper instead of at the main meal.

Animal food is also necessary for the making of blood and muscle, but the amount of meat should be carefully considered. Crisp bacon, to alternate with soft boiled eggs, is nourishing.

If you find that your child is not getting all the fat he needs you can put butter in mashed potatoes, mixing it with vegetables. An added amount of butter can be put on the chops, the beef or the minced chicken, which children should have once a day at least. When you have no meat at hand you can make an excellent soup out of chicken bones flavored with vegetables or bits of beef.

Instead of broth suggested will may be the base of vegetable purees. A soup of rice boiled in broth or milk is easily made and is nourishing. The same may be said of cornmeal broth, provided it be seasoned with plenty of butter. Cornmeal mush is also to be highly recommended on account of the long cooking.

From what has been said about soups it may be inferred that bread is an excellent food for your child. It contains many nitrogenous substances and it is rich in starches, but it is lacking in fat, which should be supplied by the using of plenty of butter. Simple custards make excellent desserts for the young child if you can make them with good milk and fresh eggs; otherwise they had better be left alone. Orange juice and scraped apples are also excellent food. They aid assimilation and help to purify the blood.

Should you find that your child loves to eat in a hurry you can teach him to masticate his food well by giving dry crusts of bread or hard baked biscuits. He will be forced to chew this.

One of the great dangers is monotony in the menus. A child, no matter how lusty and strong, can become just as quickly tired of a continued menu as its elders.

If you want your child to be strong nerved and robust do not send him to bed with a heavy meal lying on his stomach asking to be digested.

Sunlight in the Nursery.

It is impossible to overestimate the importance of sunlight in the well being of babies and little children. A nursery should always be chosen with this in view and whenever circumstances render it possible should face south, so that the greatest number of hours of sunshine may be available throughout the year. Curtains and hangings around the window would stand condemned on the score of impeding the ingress of sun if they did not on those of cleanliness and other hygienic precautions. One of the earliest signs of conscious sensibility is found in the pleasure evinced by an infant in the sun, and the improvement in growth and condition which follows upon a full amount of sunlight falling upon a child who has hitherto been deprived of it in greater or less degree is often most remarkable.

Early Impressions.

Little Girl (at the menagerie)—And what is the name of that odd looking bird, papa?

Papa—That is a stork, my dear.

Little Girl (surprised)—Are you sure? I had always supposed that storks had but one leg.

"Hodge Podge" Wins.

Railroad Co. Contends Dr. O'Meara Was Mistaken as to Claim Agent He Discussed Anderson Case With —Denies Promise to Pay Bill.

When the case of Dr. Mark O'Meara against the New York Central Railroad Co., to recover $1,000 for professional services rendered the late William Anderson, driver of a stage which was struck by a Wallkill Valley train at Binnewater early on the morning of February 13, 1914, was resumed in Supreme Court before Justice G. D. B. Hasbrouck and a jury this morning, the plaintiff was on the stand, undergoing cross-examination by Amos Van Etten, attorney for the defendant company. Dr. O'Meara claims that he received intsruction over the telephone from a claim agent of the New York Central stopping in the Stuyvesant Hotel to take care of and operate on Anderson in the Benedictine Sanitarium and that a definite promise that he would be paid was made. The defense contends that there was no promise of payment. Waldo C. Freeman, the claim agent, denied on the stand Wednesday afternoon that he contracted, or attempted to contract with Dr. O'Meara for the care of Anderson, who died after being in the sanitarium six days.

The doctor was questioned at length this morning regarding his conversation with Freeman and the time of his operation on Anderson.

On re-direct examination by Judge N. Frank O'Reilly, assisted by Andrew J. Cook, Dr. O'Meara said he is not a general practitioner, but a 'consulting and operating surgeon." He frequently receives $50 for consultations and has got as much as $450 for an operation for appendicitis. He is attending physician in the Benedictine Sanitarium. He said he considered his individual services in the Anderson case, aside from aid given by Drs. O'Leary, Snyder and Gates, to have been worth $1,000. This statement followed an intimation by Justice Hasbrouck to the plaintiff's attorney that he did not consider the giving of authority to a physician to treat a patient carried the right to employ physicians to assist him.

Eugene B. Carey of Kingston, one of the young persons injured in the collision, told of Claim Agent Freeman calling on him in the Kingston City Hospital and saying the two railroad surgeons were busy and the patient could have the services of his family physician and the railroad would pay.

Miss Edna Stokes, another who was injured, was not permitted to testify, because the claim agent she had dealings with was E. T. Jones, not Freeman.

Dr. Fred Snyder, a practitioner for seven years connected with the Benedictine Sanitarium, told of Anderson's injuries when he was brought in and of the operation performed on him. He said a reasonable value of Dr. O'Meara's services was $1,000. His own services in the case were worth $100.

Miss Frances M. Cable, injured in the accident, was not allowed to testify, for the same reason as Miss Stokes.

Miss Bella Leete's appearance on the stand similarly was brief.

The plaintiff rested and Mr. Van Etten moved for a dismissal of the suit on the ground of lack of evidence and alleged faulty pleadings. The motion was denied.

Night Yardman Testifies.

Chauncey Stewart, nightyardman in the employ of the West Shore, called by the defense, testified to the bringing of the injured persons to the station in this city and of Anderson requesting that he be taken to the sanitarium and that Dr. O'Meara attend him. Stewart said City Judge O'Reilly, attorney in this case, called up Dr. O'Meara on the 'phone and told him about Anderson's injuries and his request.

Claim Agent Dunn's Testimony.

David R. Dunn of New York, claim agent, said he, Freeman and Jones, are employed under Harry H. Downs, who is chief claim agent. He told of having had a talk over the telephone in the trainmaster's office in the West Shore station, soon after the accident, with a man who said he was Dr. O'Meara. The defense contends it was Dunn, not Freeman, that the doctor alleges he got a contract from to attend Anderson. Downs and other agents were in the immediate vicinity at the time. Dunn testified that after he talked with his chief he told Dr. O'Meara "they were not in a position at that time to say they would assume the bill for Anderson's care."

Chief Claim Agent on Stand.

Harry H. Downs, an elderly man, said he is chief claim agent for the New York Central "east of Buffalo and also west of Buffalo as far as the Pennsylvania line." He testified that Freeman was not authorized to employ outside surgeons. The company has two surgeons, Drs. Stern and Keator, in Kingston. Downs corroborated Dunn as to what the latter said over the 'phone to Dr. O'Meara. Witness testified that an agent could not settle a claim for more than $250 without consulting his superior.

Downs was in charge of the settlement of the claims in Kingston in February, 1914. Besides several agents from New York city, he was aided by three from Albany. All these scattered among the injured and then made reports to the chief, on terms of settlement. Downs admited that Freeman had charge of the Anderson claim.

Freeman was recalled and was followed on the stand by E. T. Jones, who said he assisted Freeman and Oakes in the Anderson case.

Dr. A. A. Stern, a practitioner in Kingston since 1889, took the stand just previous to the noon recess. Dr. Keator was to follow him, and the case was then to be summed up.

No Cases to Be Added.

Justice Hasbrouck announced this afternoon that no cases will be added to the day calendar in supreme court and the October term, now in its fourth week, will be adjourned to chambers, where special matters are to come up, following the trial of the Lang vs. Van Bramer suit.

A WORRIER

Thanksgiving Day Brought Her a Respite

By DWIGHT NORWOOD

When the great war broke out in Europe my little girl, Fredrica, was in Munich studying art. I at once became uneasy about her, and when I heard of the great number of Americans detained in Europe I lost my head entirely. I wanted John to go abroad at once and bring our daughter home.

He endeavored to quiet me, reminding me that Fredrica was not the child she had been; that it would be difficult for him to get across, still more difficult to find her and much more difficult still to get back to America. He was worried himself, though he did not admit it to me, well knowing that we had been able only to keep our child supplied with sufficient funds to pay her way from month to month without providing anything ahead, and she had no means to bring her home.

Week after week passed, and we heard nothing from our chick. Worrying told on me bodily, and I was reduced to skin and bone. At last I told John that if he did not do something to end my suspense he would lose me as well as Fredrica. He went out at once to learn if he could get across the ocean, and, finding that a ship would sail next day, he took passage on her and, procuring by loan what money he would need, bade me goodby. "I have no doubt," he said, "that Fred will be here with you before I return. Nevertheless there is no help for it; I must go after her."

As soon as he had gone I was half sorry I had let him go. Now I had the two of them to worry about instead of one. Besides, by this time ships began to come in loaded with returning Americans, and the stories of their discomforts were harrowing. John went over in an English ship, and I worried lest he should be captured by one of the German war vessels at that time roving the sea.

When, true enough, I took up a newspaper and saw that this had really happened I was in despair. It was all I could bear to think of my only child detained without means in Germany, and now I had the additional worriment of her father carried about on the ocean with no prospect of being landed anywhere, for he might be captured by a German cruiser, and they were running the gantlet of the enemy's cruisers and often did not put into port for months at a time.

John started abroad about the 1st of September. Of course he could not communicate with me unless put ashore, and even then he might be landed on the other side of the world, in which case the mails being interrupted, it might take a letter months to reach me. At that time I had only our daughter to worry about, and now the causes of worriment were tripled. I worried about Fredrica, I worried about John, and I worried because I knew that John would worry about me. I believed that if I could have thought of anything else to worry about I would have included it. The only thing else there was to worry about was myself, but that didn't trouble me a bit. And yet there was apparently more cause to worry about myself than either of the others, for I had lost twenty pounds and was gradually sinking into the grave.

November came and not a word from either of my absent ones. I had intimate friends, of course, who tried in every way to bolster me up. My cousin, Ellen Thompson, asked me about a week before Thanksgiving to promise that I would spend the day with her and her large family. She said that with so many of them I would forget my troubles. I told her that I would be more miserable in the midst of a happy family than alone; I would spend Thanksgiving in my own home, enduring my loneliness as best I could.

The day before Thanksgiving I went around to Ellen Thompson's to ask if she had seen in any of the papers a notice of the landing of the persons that the German cruiser had captured.

"Why, Ellen, what in the world are you going to do with two turkeys?" I exclaimed, noticing a pair of gobblers just delivered from the market.

"Oh, we've so many mouths to fill," she said, "that one turkey won't do."

It seemed to me that she had ordered provisions enough to last her a fortnight. But I said no more about it, and since Ellen said that she hadn't seen anything to comfort me in the papers I went home. I carried more worry with me, for before I left Ellen she put her arms about me and smiled at me. I reckoned that she was concealing some bad news from me.

The next morning, Thanksgiving day, I had scarcely finished dressing when, hearing a vehicle stop before the house, I looked out through the window, and who should I see but John alighting from a cab! And the next thing I saw was John handing out Fredrica. I ran downstairs at the risk of my neck, and, meeting them at the front door, together they kept me from falling on the floor in a faint.

Soon after their arrival Ellen brought us an extra Thanksgiving dinner she had provided for us, for John had sent her a message from quarantine to let her know that he and Fredrica were coming. We had a glorious Thanksgiving, John and Fredrica narrating their adventures. John had been put ashore from a cruiser that had captured him in an out of the way place and had gone to Munich, where he found Fredrica quietly pursuing her studies, waiting her next remittance.

I tell John that I will never worry again. He adds, "Till the next time."

It Makes Tracks.

One day small Harold came running into the house, and, holding up a horseshoe, he exclaimed:

"Oh, mamma, some poor horse lost one of his tracks, and I found it."—Kansas City Star.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Look out for the weanlings and colts as cold weather approaches.

Don't make the pigs sleep outdoors during the cold nights. Make the shelters comfortable or let them run in the pig house to sleep.

There is and always will be an active demand for high class lambs and sheep.

Good horses are in such demand now that it will pay any farmer with good horse sense to sit up and take notice.

Keep the flock out of the early fall rains. A cold contracted in the first cold rain will stay with a ewe all winter.

It is not wise to allow young sows to become too fat, as they never make as good breeders as those with more development of muscle.

FARM METHODS OF WINTERING SHEEP

Good shelter and plenty of fresh water save a lot of feed in winter, writes a Missouri correspondent of the Farm Progress.

Give me a good sheep shed, the right kind of open lots and plenty of fresh water, and I believe I can winter sheep easier than any other animal on the farm. During the month and a half of deep snows, cold weather and cold rains the warm sheep shed has saved much feed. Give them a warm shed, and it will not take nearly so much grain and hay.

I know a good many men who seem to think that any kind of an old shed is good enough for their sheep. They will use an old barn with half the siding ripped off and the whole interior open to blowing snow and driving rain. They are not worried much if the roof is full of holes and lets in the water. That is very bad for the sheep. The fleeces get soaked through, and it takes days for them to dry out. As long as they are wet to the skin the sheep are in fine shape to come down with an attack of a sort of bronchitis that kills as quick as pneumonia.

Last winter I fed a lot of straw. This was from necessity, as I much prefer feeding some upland hay like timothy. Cowpeas were fed for a part of the winter, as long as they held out, in fact, but I had to rely on oat straw for the most part.

No picture more beautiful can be imagined than a flock of Cheviots on a verdant blue grass pasture. Their pure whiteness and alertness make these sheep most attractive, and the green background sets them off without compare. Because of their beauty they will be found on many estates where scenic effect is all important in stock and crops. The sheep shown is a Cheviot wether.

In the worst of the bad weather I fed some ground oats. I gave the sheep this ration in the morning and let them run around the feed racks all day. These were kept filled all winter. I built them inside the barns, arranging them so the sheep were forced to feed from near the base of the racks. This keeps the trash out of the fleeces. I used some gravel and sand in putting in the floors and arranged that drainage around the barns so there would be no seeping of water under the edges of the building. If the floor is dry the sheep will be comfortable if given a little bedding.

It is strange how the old belief that sheep do not need much water persists. They need as much water in proportion to their size as any other domestic animal. They do not like icy water any better than a cow or a horse.

Keep the sheep out of the cold rains of late winter and early spring and you will save feed and prevent loss of flesh and condition.

Culling the Ewe Flock.

In culling out the undesirables much care should be taken to see that all barren ewes, ewes that are poor milkers or ewes that have spoiled udders go to the market. Many times a big, fat ewe is the most handsome in all the flock, and the owner hates to sell her because she looks good, which is principally on account of her high condition. Such ewes are drones in the flock and parasites on the feed bin. A ewe that is thin may be so because she has raised her lamb well. She certainly should have a place reserved for her with those that are to remain. By the time the breeding season is at hand she will be in a gaining condition.

The Good Draft Horse.

In temperament the draft horse is generally lymphatic, but he should not be too sluggish. While the nature of his work requires him to be steady and easily managed, it is nevertheless essential that it should be performed willingly and with some snap and vigor.

Obedient.

"Well, my little man," queried the minister who was making a call, "do you always do as your mamma tells you?"

"You bet I do," answered the precocious five-year-old, "and so does papa."

Food of the Gods.

Chocolate has a long reputation as a food, though its manufacture into cakes is comparatively modern. As a beverage the European found it already in high favor when he arrived in America. The Emperor Montezuma of Mexico, for instance, had fifty pitchers of it prepared for his daily consumption, in addition to the 2,000 allowed to his household. And the value of the cocoa plant made such an impression on Linnaeus that he named it theobroma, which is Greek for food of the gods.—London Standard.

MENKE'S DAILY SPORTING LETTER

(By Frank G. Menke.)

New York, Nov. 11.—Jack Dillon looks very conspicuously along the pugilistic horizon just now He doesn't seem sizeable enough to battle successfully against Jess Willard, but he's surely big enough to take on—and probaby beat—the fellows who have been pestering Willard with challenges.

Dillon, however, yearns to swap punches with the champion. He's confident that he can beat him.

"Six months ago when I announced that I'd fight any heavyweight in the country, some folks laughed at me," said Dillon. "I said I could beat the best of them—and the louder was the laugh. For the next six months I tried to prove my claim by getting a fight with some of those heavies

"Well, at last I got a chance against Charley Weinert. He was touted as one of the best heavies in the game He was far bigger than me, he outweighed me—but I beat him and all the newspaper men who saw that scrap say I beat him in a most decisive manner.

"I weigh only 170 pounds—but that's no handicap. I'm after Willard. He's my goal No man has ever knocked me off my feet and I don't think that Willard can turn the trick. If he can't, I'll outpoint him in every round."

Jack Dillon vs. Frank Moran.

Promoters just now are trying to arrange a Jack Dillon-Frank Moran match. Dillon is eager to take a crack at the conqueror of Jim Coffey and he isn't quibbling over terms He'll fight for anything he can get. But with Moran it is different He's very coy. He wants a large guarantee waved at him and his demands just now are a bit too large for the ordinary promoter. But Moran probably will come to earth shortly, make a moderate request and the bout will be on.

It ought to be a hummer.

Kid Lewis a New Star.

Jimmy Johnson, the fight impressario of New York city and nearby points, seems to have unearthed a real star in Kid ("Ted") Lewis, the lightweight person.

Lewis has been performing recently up in Boston town and has been hammering all his foes with much gusto He's fast, has a good head, a punch—and he's a willing worker.

Johnson says of his man:

"He'll fight any lightweight in the country at 133; he'll take on Willie Ritchie and allow him 142; he'll meet Jack Dillon if Jack can make 158 and he'll take on Packey McFarland at catch weights."

Eddie McGoorty Does "Come Back."

Eddie McGoorty seems to have accomplished a real "come back" since Les Darcy knocked him out After that scrap McGoorty declared he was over trained—that in his efforts to make the weight he had "left my fight on the road." McGoorty's showing since then seems to bear him out in his statement that he wasn't through.

McGoorty has mingled in four battles in Australia since the Darcy affair and he has won each via the knockout route. His victims have been Billy Murray, the California middleweight, Harold Hardurck, the Australian heavyweight, Harry Reeves, of England and Joe Bonds who gained quite a reputation in Australia

Bully work, Edward! More power to your right hook! Here's hoping you get another chance at Darcy—and that you win.

Stamford, the leaders in the Interstate Basketball League, will be the opponents of the Kingston team at the armory Friday evening. Taylor, a new man to Kingston fans, is the other guard. Hogan, another new player, also is a guard. At center the visitors have Smith, who fans will remember as playing the pivot position for Yonkers in the old Hudson River League. The two forwards, Norman and Barry are former members of John Penino's Brooklyn team, which aggregation defeated Kingston with ease, while they were in the New York State League. Dreyfus was also a member of the Brooklyn team at the time.

With this lineup the visitors should make Morgenweck's old timers hustle to come out on the large end of the score Friday night. Kingston will have their their first team in action, Wachter, Johnson, Tome, Barger and Henschel on the floor. John O'Toole, the best referee in the league will officiate, while Matthew Bence will be the official timer. After the game there will be dancing, music being furnished by Martin.

When Barrett was injured in the Harvard game, Shiverick was elected to do most of the punting and running for Cornell. He did it so well that Barrett's loss was not felt.
